

Nothing in the way of news here but I thought it was interesting that Evans wasn't too confident about Joe Johnston's Captain America: TFA upon viewing the trailer. Something echoed by many here on CBM. Of course his fears proved unnecessary as the movie was a big success, but check out what he has to say to Suntimes.. “The weekend of opening, I was really nervous,” actor Chris Evans says about the superhero movie that changed his life. “It needed to be a hit. Who knows why it’s a hit? There’s no rhyme or reason why something works or not in this business. “When I saw the first trailer for the film, I thought, ‘It’s not going to work,’ ” he says. “Now, people love it.” Just goes to show you that even being shot in practically every scene in a movie doesn't always assuage an actor's doubts about what kind of finished product

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrants/news/?a=47062&t=Chris_Evans_Was_Nervous_About_iCaptain_America_TFAi_After_Seeing_The_First_Trailer