

As you might have seen, Marvel recently released a brand new poster for The Avengers which was extremely stale and boring. So as you would suspect we have a rather stale and boring interview from EW about Thor in Avengers Assemble. Thor, who went from an immature cocky warrior to a mature leader in about five minutes in his debut film, will continue to be mature. No way! "There's a maturity to the character because of the journey he went on, certainly. He was a petulant sort of kid at the beginning of Thor, and by the end of it hopefully you walk away thinking that he is matured and there was a grounded quality to him that wasn't there before." Remember that fish out of water humor that went over so well in the first film? Expect more of that. "There are certainly moments where Thor says things and there's a sideways
