

This week, Universal Pictures participated in CinemaCon for the first time in a couple years. They premiered new footage from nine of their upcoming films, including the Tom Cruise-starrer science fiction film Oblivion and the Dark Horse Comics adaptation of R.I.P.D. (which stars Ryan Reynolds and Jeff Bridges). Collider was present at the event, and below is their take on the new footage shown for the two films. For their coverage on other movies (such as Ted, Snow White & The Huntsman and The Bourne Legacy), click the link below. Even though production has just begun on Joseph Kosinski's Oblivion, Universal showed footage from the first few days of filming! In the brief snippets of footage we saw Tom Cruise commanding a ship, Morgan Freeman looking badass with a cool looking beard, and the beginnings of an action sequence. For those unfamiliar with the film, Cruise plays a veteran soldier who's banished

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=58709>