

SPOILER FREE As per the usual with my reviews, I like to start by talking about the bad aspects of the film, and I think this is going to be a very short section because with Captain America: The First Avenger I couldn't find many faults, I tried to be as open minded as I could, accepting the good with the bad, but in this case there really isn't many bad things that can be said about the film. One of the main gripes I had with the film is that all the CGI scenes of Steve Rogers running extremely fast looked, for lack of a better word ridiculous, I found myself sitting in my seat trying not to laugh out loud. Remember the scene in the original Superman, with Clark running along side the train, take that, add better CGI and that's exactly what it reminded me of. I'll admit it's pretty
