

MTV Geek reports that DC Comics will launch a new six-issue comic series based on the He-Man & The Masters Of The Universe in July. The series will be written by James Robinson and drawn by Phillip Tan and inks from Ruy Jose. The plot sees that "the skull faced arch-enemy of He-Man [Skeletor] has figured out a way to rewrite the reality of Eternia, casting himself as the ruler of Castle Grayskull, and our heroes - including He-Man - as regular peasants with no memory of their previous life. And while simple woodsman Adam may dream of wielding a massive sword, and fighting in battles, he thinks they're just dreams. That is, until a mysterious sorceress approaches him, and sends him on an epic journey to save all of Eternia." MTV Geek scored an interview with Robinson, who discusses reinventing the He-Man mythology and keeping true to what made the

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=57529>