

Source: Newsarama I think everyone knew a crossover event from the DC New 52 would happen at some point however, I bring news that DC just might be changing how crossover events are handled. The first such event pits two of DC's top monsters, OMAC and Frankenstein against one another in what is sure to be a knock-down-drag-out fight of epic proportions. However, what's intriguing about this news is the fact that while the story will be covered in both O.M.A.C. #5 and Frankenstein: Agent of S.H.A.D.E. #5, the two titles will merely complement one another. Instead of being required reading, the two titles will merely tell the same story from two different viewpoints. Said Kieth Giffens, who co-writes OMAC with Dan DiDio, "One of the things I'm proudest of about this Frankenstein-O.M.A.C. crossover is that I think we're doing it right," he said. "We're doing it in such a

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=51953&t=C>
OMICS First Crossover Event For DCs The New 52 Reveals A Change In Policy