

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/thegopherhole/news/?a=28695&t=COMICS_Godzilla_Kingdom_of_Monsters

It has been far too long since Godzilla has stomped a comic city to smithereens. But thanks to IDW Publishing, The King of Monsters comes roaring back to comics in March. The team behind his triumphant return is "Goon" creator Eric Powell co-writing with Tracy Marsh and artist Phil Hester. In an interview with CBR, we learn that in "Godzilla: Kingdom of Monsters", the world in which they come storming out to has never before encountered a threat like them. Marsh adds, "it's about as prepared to handle the attacks as it was to handle September 11 or the earthquake in Haiti. The results are much the same as they were after those events—everything goes haywire. People are scared, hurt, dead, homeless, in need of resources they can't get. But in 'Kingdom of Monsters,' it happens over and over. SNAFU!" Powell goes on to tell