

Jim Lee and Dan Didio wrote an open letter to fans on the DCU Blog that touches on a recent concern from fans over a lack of female artist, writers, and characters in DC. In the letter Lee and Didio talk about taking fan concern seriously and that they have exciting projects involving women in the pipeline that will be announced closer to publication. From DC: Over the past week we've heard from fans about a need for more women writers, artists and characters. We want you to know, first and foremost, that we hear you and take your concerns very seriously. We've been very fortunate in recent years to have fan favorite creators like Gail Simone, Amy Reeder, Felicia Henderson, Fiona Staples, Amanda Connor, G. Willow Wilson and Nicola Scott write and draw the adventures of the World's Greatest Super Heroes. DC Comics is the home of a pantheon of remarkable, iconic women characters

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JakeLester/news/?a=43248&t=bComicsb_Jim_Lee_And_Dan_Didio_Pledge_Commitment_To_The_Women_Creators_And_Charaacters_Of_DC