

When it was first revealed that Fantastic Four writer Jonathan Hickman would kill off a member of the team in issue #587, the reaction was fairly mixed from readers. It became even more so when it was fan favourite Johnny Storm who ended up seemingly meeting his maker at the hands of Annihilus' forces in the Negative Zone. Since his death, a new series was launched featuring Spider-Man as a member of the team in the retitled FF. (Future Foundation) In issue #600, which went on sale today, the Human Torch returned and Comic Book Resources caught up with Hickman to discuss where things go from here. "Johnny's death and then resurrection in the Negative Zone was always part of my initial plan for the book," Hickman said. "That's why when I heard talk about editorial mandates I chuckled, because it just wasn't the case with this at all. Even though I

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=50218&t=COMICS Jonathan Hickman Talks About The Shocking Events Of iFanta stic_Four_600i