

In a lengthy interview with Newsarama, Kieron Gillen has revealed his plans for the Armoured Avenger in this November's relaunched Iron Man series. The British writer has quickly become one of Marvel's best writers, with fantastic runs on Journey Into Mystery (where he has made 'Kid Loki' a fan favourite character) and Uncanny X-Men. The Marvel NOW! series will see Gillen re-team with artist Greg Land, and he talks about all that and more below. Be sure to click on the link at the bottom of the page to read the Q&A in full. On Whether He Has Talked To Invincible Iron Man Writer Matt Fraction At All: We've talked a little, though less than you'd think. Primarily we've just been making sure our books line up, in terms of where he's leaving Tony and where I'm starting off. I'm a little nervous of showing him anything actually — I haven't shown any

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=66548>