

Back in June, Marvel took a not-so-subtle swipe at the oft-derided "Martha" scene from Batman V Superman in the pages of Spider-Man/Deadpool, and now they're at it again - only this time it couldn't be any more blatant. As you can see for yourselves below, just before Domino takes out a couple of goons in Uncanny X-Men Annual #1, one tells the other about some guy he couldn't bring himself to kill because their mothers share the same name. You guessed it: Martha. Personally, I thought this scene worked well and think it goes a lot deeper than Batman hesitating to land the killing blow simply because his mother is also called Martha - but, the majority of fans feel it deserves the backlash, so there's bound to be a few CBMers that get a kick out of this. Batman V Superman: Dawn of Justice is out of DVD and Blu-ray now.

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/batman_vs_superman/comics-marvel-takes-another-shot-at-the-martha-scene-from-a146946