

Well...the artwork is pretty good at least! My God, this is actually happening. And look at the talent involved - the team of artists and writers collaborating on the effort include Eisner Award winning writer Paul Jenkins (Wolverine: Origins, Batman, Hulk, Spider-Man), pencil and inks by Talent Caldwell (Superman, X-Men, G.I. Joe), and coloring by Paul Mounts (Avengers, Ultimate X-Men, Wolverine, and Thor). I'm just curious as to what adventures our hero is going to be getting into. Some gym time, a session in the tanning booth, drunken sex with Snookie? You can find out soon enough, as the first issue is due on shelves in time for Wizard World Chicago Comic Con, August 9-12, at which Sorrentino will make his first appearance in support of the new project.
