

We have already heard a few snippets from Lee and Johns about the decision to go back and essentially reboot(although they aren't calling it that officially) many of DC's heavy hitter by coming with brand new origin stories for The Justice League. Now, speaking to Hero Complex the two go into some more detail.. Jim Lee on the "unprecedented" decision to reinvent the League.. "It's not just renumbering all of these books, but it's also about going systematically through the entire DC universe and sort of reenergizing and reimagining a lot of the stuff that sort of formed these characters, the back stories. We're talking about 'Justice League,' but there's never been a really awesome origin for the Justice League. ... To me, it's a prime example of something that we can go in and maybe add something to the lore and add a really kickass contemporary story that feels modern and really
