

The quotes below were posted by Teen Titans artist, Brett Booth, and spotted by Bleeding Cool. The first group of text is how writer Scott Lobdell described the gay character in the script, while the lengthier one below that is Booth's reaction to the criticism, explaining in detail the decisions behind the creation and personality of "Bunker". Oh, and there's also a first look at the new superhero in full costume. His real name is Miguel Jose Barragan. He was raised in a very small Mexican village called El Chilar. He was very loved by his family and the village as well — and they were as accepting of his homosexuality as they were to his super powers when they first manifested. To that end he grew up in an angst-free environment. He was born out of the closet and so he has a very refreshing outlook on life. So Bunker has been
