

Source: Huffington Post I'm seriously jealous of George Toman. According to the Huffington Post, Toman was cleaning out his attic on a recent weekend at his home in Willow Springs when we rediscovered a box of old comic books one of which happened to be Amazing Fantasy #15 (originally published in August of 1962), which features the very first appearance of Spider-Man. Some of you may remember that, another copy of Amazing Fantasy #15 was discovered last year and sold for $1.2 million dollars. Toman's comic isn't worth nearly that much. It's currently priced at $12,000 as it's nowhere near mint condition as it was stored in an attic for 40 years without plastic or cardboard backing. "It was quite a surprise," Toman said. "I was in disbelief." So what will Toman do with his share of the money once the comic has sold? "I don't know, I'll probably just reinvest it or something,"

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=50420&t=C>
OMICS Spider-Man Comic Found In Attic Worth 10k