

It's not the best quality, but thanks to Batman-News, we have a brand new image from the Justice League movie. It looks like it may hail from a magazine or something similar, and with any luck, an official version will be online sooner rather than later. As you can see, it features Batman (Ben Affleck) in his armour alongside Wonder Woman (Gal Gadot), Cyborg (Ray Fisher), The Flash (Ezra Miller), and Aquaman (Jason Momoa) as he finally joins the team after refusing Bruce Wayne's offer in the trailer. Interestingly, there's still no sign of Superman (Henry Cavill), and while his return is pretty much the worst kept secret in the DC Films Universe as of right now, it looks like Warner Bros. plans on keeping the Man of Steel under wraps for the time being. That will make seeing him standing alongside the team even more special when Justice League is finally released in November, but you have to wonder exactly how

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/justice\_league/cyborg-leads-the-team-into-battle-in-epic-new-still-from-zack-a148005