

In an interview with Entertainment Weekly, co-writer Damon Lindelof discusses his work on Ridley Scott's highly anticipated science fiction film Prometheus. He talks about turning Jon Spaihts' original screenplay from an Alien prequel to what the film currently is. Lindelof also talks about the movie's relation to the Alien franchise, while also commenting on the praised viral marketing campaign and the themes of the film. On Working On Jon Spaihts' Script, And Prometheus' Relationship To Alien: "I wrote maybe a four or five paragraph email saying here are all the things I love about it, I think there are some incredible set pieces here, I love the fundamental idea behind the movie, I feel like it's a cool think piece. BUT I think it's relying a bit too heavily on the Alien stuff that we've seen now five or six times in different movies. Chest-bursting and face-hugging and xenomorphs and I just feel

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=59577>