

Michael Clarke Duncan suffered a myocardial infarction on July 13th, but was finally released from intensive care early last month. Despite seemingly being on the road to recovery, he went into cardiac arrest in his home at 2am this morning and was rushed to hospital soon after. As you can see from the video report below, it was believed that he was in a stable condition, but that sadly ended up not being the case as the actor has passed away. While he will always be remembered for playing 'John Coffey' in The Green Mile, Duncan will be most recognisable to readers of this site for playing 'The Kingpin' in Daredevil, voicing 'Kilowog' in Green Lantern and as 'Manute' in Sin City. Rest In Peace. BREAKING: "Green Mile" actor Michael Clarke Duncan dead at 54, his fiancée says.— The Associated Press (@AP) September 3, 2012

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=66740>