

While the Netflix and ABC branches of Marvel TV are definitively set in the world Marvel Cinematic Universe, the possibility of those characters appearing in the Marvel films has always been a dicey subject. While many point to the rift between Marvel Studios President Kevin Feige and Marvel CEO Ike Perlmutter as the main reason, both Feige and Head of Marvel TV Jeph Loeb have remained steadfast in their responses: it will happen if and when it feels natural and makes sense. For Daredevil star Vincent D'Onofrio, the answer is pretty cut and dry. The actor, who plays Wilson Fisk/the Kingpin, is a proud comic book fan and has expressed his excitement to appear in Marvel films many times, though he isn't hopeful to get the call. "I would love to switch over to the movies, but I think it's pretty much been said it's not going to happen," he said in an interview with Digital Spy. "Or at least not for a very,

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/tv/marvel/defenders/daredevils-vincent-donofrio-doubts-hell-ever-show-up-in-a-a148236>