In an interview with MTV SPLASH PAGE, Dark Horse President Mike Richardson was questioned about upcoming movie projects. Richardson was first questioned about The Goon, which has been struggling to pick up funding: "We're out putting the project together, still raising funds," said Richardson of "The Goon." "We're certainly hoping to have success in that soon." Richardson also expressed his hopefulness that the project will get funded soon: "It's a great clip," he said of the teaser that premiered on Splash Page. "Blur Studios did a great job. We're hopeful. We think it's a very original series, and something the fans will really embrace. We're hoping to get it funded really soon." Richardson was also asked about the upcoming adaption of the 2000 graphic novel R.I.P.D.: "Robert Schwentke is working on designs and we're moving forward on that one," said Richardson. "We're hoping for a start date sometime this summer. It's a project we've invested a
