

There seems to be a bit of a trend developing with people involved with the Star Wars movies taking a little crack at the prequels now that we have saga available on Blu-ray and the documentary The People VS George Lucas out on DVD too. Last week Empire Strikes Back producer Gary Kurtz explained why he wasn't a fan and now Peter Serafinowicz, who provided the few spoken words from Darth Maul in The Phantom Menace, says despite having a great time making the movie he didn't think it was up to much at all.. "I was very disappointed when the film actually came out, because I didn't think it was very good! But it was certainly an extremely exciting thing to be a part of. Asked if he joked about the film with Simon Pegg, whose Spaced character Tim famously hated the film, Serafinowicz added: "Yeah, sure! I think I rang him

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsranst/news/?a=48711&t=Darth_Maul_Voice_Actor_Peter_Serafinowicz_Doesnt_Think_Much_Of_The_Phantom_Menace