

Talking to Collider at the Saturn Awards last week, Make-Up Supervisor Dave Elsey has shared his thoughts on creating Beast for 2011's X-Men: First Class and his hopes to return to the universe created by Matthew Vaughn in the 2014 sequel (rumoured to be titled X-Men: Days of Future Past). To hear more from Elsey on his other projects (including David Hayter's Wolves), be sure to click on the link at the bottom of the page. "The biggest challenge on X-Men [First Class] was that I was actually brought in quite late. In fact, all of the other characters had been designed and signed off long before I was there. They were filming by the time I came on board and all I knew was that we had to do make-up on Nick Hoult. I remembered Nick from About A Boy and thought he was a kid, so I was surprised to

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=64753>