Even though broadcast networks passed on his script this week David E Kelley still sounds very optimistic about Wonder Woman making it to our tv screens next year.. "I think the likelihood is we'll see it next year, I'm being optimistic but I don't think I'm being unrealistic." Kelley said that he was going to bring the project back to NBC, who reportedly passed first time around. But he maintains that the script being "rolled out very late in the game" may have had something to do with this. From The Hollywood Reporter.. He(Kelley) said that the network(ABC), premiering his new legal drama Harry's Law on Monday, which he was promoting at the Television Critics Association winter press tour, would be a "good home for it" under incoming programming chief Robert Greenblatt. "I like to think of it as a smart script and I know he responds to smart material," Kelley said Thursday of
