

There's just under seven months to go until the next installment in the DCEU, Wonder Woman, arrives in theatres. With the character's 75th anniversary being celebrated this year, along with a standout appearance in Batman v Superman back in March, anticipation for the character's first solo outing is at an all time high. President of DC Entertainment Diane Nelson counts herself among those who are waiting excitedly for the film, and recently praised the film's star, Gal Gadot. In a video interview with Variety, Nelson said she believed that DC and Warner Bros. got very lucky with Gadot's casting, citing both the audience response to the character, along with Gadot's personal attributes, as huge positives. "It's a testament to Zack Snyder's casting ability. I think Gal was someone who embodied the role so beautifully, and we saw lots of evidence on how audiences responded when she came onscreen for the first time...she and Ben Affleck really stood out as two amazing parts of [Batman
