

One of the most upsetting news stories of 2016 has to be the fact that Tim Miller will no longer take the helm of Deadpool 2. It was a decision made due to reported creative differences between the filmmaker and Ryan Reynolds, and there have since been reports that it came down to Miller wanting to increase the budget by as many as three times and his desire to cast Bloodline's Kyle Chandler as Cable. However, in a recent Q&A (via Collider), Miller decided to clear things up about his departure. "I just want to say one thing to the geek audience out there, because it's important to me what the geeks and nerds of the world think because they are my brothers and sisters. I didn't want to make some stylized movie that was 3 times the budget. If you read the internet — who cares, really? But for those of you who do, I wanted to make the same kind

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/deadpool/deadpool-director-tim-miller-addresses-his-departure-from-the-sequel-a147437>