

The Geek Files report that Deadpool will indeed go into production at some point this year. While director Tim Miller has been attached to the project since last April, there's been little news in regards to the official status of the spin-off - we were repeatedly assured that it was still happening, just not when exactly. Of course, it was only last week that artist Rob Liefeld revealed that he'd seen eight minutes of test footage for the R-Rated flick. In other news, the site goes on to reveal that Green Lantern star Ryan Reynolds is still attached to play the 'Merc With A Mouth.' Their sources at 20th Century Fox have also confirmed that The Wolverine will go into production this year.

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=53044&t=DEADPOOL_Likely_To_Go_Into_Production_This_Year_Ryan_Reynolds_Still_Attached