

A friend of mine on Facebook, Rick Kinkade, was able to visit the Albuquerque offices of The Avengers and meet with director Joss Whedon. He had participated in a charity benefiting the Gulf Coast and had won an audience with "The Whedon". Initially, Whedon had planned to use the Wasp in the film and said, "I tried to write her in, but I could not make it work." He laughed and said, "I need more chicks in this movie!" It's possible that Whedon could not use the Wasp due to Edgar Wright's impending Ant-Man film. At the time, the thing Whedon was most worried about was the lack of rehearsal time with the cast and a table read was pretty much out of the question. Regarding the CG elements, the only two purely CG characters would be the Hulk and Iron Man. He had worked on Ang Lee's Hulk script and tried

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/avengers/news/?a=45418&t=Details_For_i_The_Avengersi_Planned_Opening_Revealed