

During a lengthy Q&A with The New York Times earlier today, Ben Affleck touched on a number of topics (the video below really is well worth watching), and The Batman inevitably came up. Unfortunately, the update isn't a particularly positive one, though if you're patient and hoping for a perfect movie revolving around the Caped Crusader, then it may be exactly what you wanted to hear! "We still have to get a screenplay and get it together," Affleck explained (via Batman-News). "I'm a real believer in not reverse engineering projects to meet a window or a date, but rather when you get the right story, the right idea, the right thing, then you make the movie. That's what we're doing, and I'm hoping to get that done. I'm spending a lot of time working on that, but also working on other stuff." So, he's hard at work, but when will it happen? Only when Affleck is good and ready! "If I could, there's

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/batman/director-ben-affleck-explains-why-hes-taking-his-time-with-the-batman-a147480>