

Back in April, Black Film had a chance to interview Tim Story for his new film Think Like a Man. He was also asked about Fantastic Four, what he thinks of the upcoming reboot and what would he like to see in that one. As you know, Story directed the two previous Fantastic Four films, so it's interesting to see what he has to say. More below: "I knew that would happen. It's inevitable. I was part of a franchise where the guy who's going to do the next one will do 2 or 3 films and someone else will come in when they reinvent it again. I literally can't wait to see the next one because you want to see what they do with it. It's all good. It's about commerce and the also the industry that we are in." As for what storyline he would like to see in the reboot,

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/Wolvie09/news/?a=65286>