

With director Taika Waititi describing the fights in Thor: Ragnarok as having a classic feel, it looks as if we'll be getting something akin to their brief dust-up in the first Avengers film on the Helicarrier. Only this time, they'll be in an arena filled with bloodthirsty alien spectators. Oh, and the Odinson won't have Mjölfnir at his side as confirmed by the new synopsis for the film, recently released by Marvel. "I like it when characters have to deal with their biggest test," said Waititi on Thor's perilous journey. "It feels like a classic matchup where you go, 'Who else can we put in this? Let's put in the Hulk!' It's like kids in the sand pit, throwing everything in." It seems like while Thor is away, Heimdall and the rest of Asgard will be under attack from Cate Blanchett's Hela, who the director describes as "scary and powerful but also fun." Will Thor be able to return in time to save the day?

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/thor/thor\_ragnarok/does-having-the-hulk-vs-thor-fight-in-ragnarok-described-as-a-a148040