

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=27913&t=Does_This_Action_Figure_Reveal_Hulkbuster_Suit_For_iThe_Avengersi

Ok, let me make it clear that this is 100% pure speculation on my part. I came across this picture of one of the new Iron Man action figures (along with the new subheading and "Avengers Assemble" branding I reported a few weeks ago) that features a slightly different design of the Hulkbuster armour. As you can see below, rather than the huge version from the comic books and previous action figures, it's a more realistic design that seems to enhance the suit we saw in Iron Man 2. It's this design that makes me wonder if it might be based on concept art being used for The Avengers. There's nothing solid here to indicate that of course (accept for it's obvious association to that movie with the logo) but I still figured it was worth bringing to your attention. Why? Well, Hulkbuster rumours have already surfaced in the past, along with confirmation