

When The Empire Strikes Back introduced Lando Calrissian (Billy Dee Williams), Star Wars fans were won over by the character's smooth charm and winning personality. While Lando's history with Han Solo was hinted at in both the aforementioned film and Return of the Jedi, Lucasfilm's planned Han Solo anthology film looks set to deliver all the details about how the two smugglers met. Donald Glover (Atlanta, Community) will be taking on the role of a young Lando in the film, something the actor admitted was a very big deal for him when talking to the press after his Golden Globe wins this past Sunday night. "Lando's a big deal to me. It was literally the first toy I ever got. When you have something that's kind of iconic ... where people pay attention to it, it's hard because you want to live up to the expectation. But all you can do is live up to your own. And Star Wars is really high." Despite the pressure,
