

Empire sat down with Dredd screenwriter Alex Garland and John Wagner, the creator of Judge Dredd. It's a fantastic interview, a must read for any fan of Dredd. One of the topics that I found to be most interesting is that Judge Dredd is one of the few comic book Characters that actually ages. When Wagner is asked if an ending has been written for Dredd, he replies no. He believes the character will live on past his own life. At this point Alex Garland steps in and pleads with Wagner, saying that he is the only person that should have the say on Dredd's fate. Which I think we all can agree on. By the end of this brief discussion Wagner teases that perhaps he'll write the script for it and leave it in his will. The reason I bring this up is that Dredd does age, so at some point in

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/nailbiter111/news/?a=63543>