

Many thought that Dredd will be terrible. That was because of all those rumors about bad production, editing process, etc... And not to mention that the first trailer was released in late July, which is little bit late for a film coming out in September. Now that I have finally watched the film in its entirety, I can safely say that Dredd is hands down one of my favorite films of the year. And I do wonder why Lionsgate didn't have a more aggressive marketing campaign for this one. More below. Director Pete Travis filmed Dredd on a $45 million budget, which is absolutely great, because everything in this film looks fantastic. The visuals are wonderful, from a vast Mega-City One and its streets, highways and buildings, to the smart use of slow-motion and brilliant action scenes. Travis moves things along quickly (hence the 95 minutes running time), but that is not
