

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/SOAL/news/?a=27708&t=EDITORIAL_Why_the_Marvel_Cinematic_Universe_is_Kicking_the_Bejesus_out_of_DC's_Cinematic_Universe

Here's the thing I want to mention first. I'm a pretty hardcore fan of Marvel, but there are a few heroes in DC I actually enjoy. I don't love all the characters...I don't even like some of them. But my opinion on characters is moot. This is my standpoint on why I think Marvel is putting the hurt on DC. Marvel's Cinematic Universe Right now, plans are in the works to make the 2012 release of The Avengers to be the biggest and best superhero movie ever created. You would think that DC's immediate answer to this news would be a Justice League of America movie. Think again. For about the past 11 years, Marvel has been consistently putting at least one new movie out per year. Marvel is getting their properties and characters available to the world for mass consumption. This all started with the first Blade movie. For the record, I