

Article Banner Courtesy of GraphicCity Talking with MTV while promoting her new film Silent House, Elizabeth Olsen talks briefly about her involvement with Oldboy, a remake/re-adaptation of the manga and 2003 South Korean film of the same name. Last week, it was reported that Olsen was offered the female lead in the Spike Lee-directed movie, and judging from her interview with MTV, it sounds like she's going to be in it (the film has had a hard time locking down cast members before; Rooney Mara and Mia Wasikowska have previously been offered Olsen's role before turning it down). "I don't know if I can talk much about it, except for the fact that the Korean film is one of my favorite movies," Olsen said. "It's just one of those films that gets under your skin and surprises you in so many different places. It's just a story with twists and

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=55788>