

Deadline reports that The Walking Dead once again decimated the competition last night after drawing in a staggering 9.5 million viewers on AMC. 6.5 million of those were adults aged between 18 and 49. That's a drop of only 11% in that category, and 13% overall from last week's critically acclaimed season premiere. Now that Dish subscribers are once again able to watch the small screen adaptation of Robert Kirkman's hit comic book series, expect these viewers to remain steady (and possibly rise) over the next few weeks. "Shit Happens."

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=69100>