

Blastr caught up with Evangeline Lilly at New York Comic-Con and quizzed her about Peyton Reed's follow-up to Ant-Man, which will feature a more prominent role for her character, Hope Van Dyne. Lilly said it's still very early days, but the story is beginning to take shape, and she's excited because we'll get to see "the origin of The Wasp". More interestingly, the former Lost actress reveals that The Wasp won't play a role in the events of Avengers: Infinity War, but will show up in the still untitled fourth Avengers film. "I'm excited because its essentially going to be the origin of the Wasp. Of course, we're going to see the Wasp for the first time take on the mantle, and put on the suit, and fly about, and do her thing. Following that one, there's an Avengers series coming out, I believe its a two-parter, and the Wasp won't be in the first part, she'll be in the second part because

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/ant-man/evangeline-lilly-talks-ant-man-and-the-wasp-confirms-appearance-in-the-a145837>