

Batman is currently dominating the world of comic books, video games, and the big screen thanks in part to a reinvention of the character by Christopher Nolan. However, Batman has always reigned supreme in the realm of fan films. While a lot of projects and productions come and go, one company that's continuously giving fans one great Batman fan film after another, is Bat In The Sun. Recently, I had the chance to pick the brain of the man behind all of those films, Aaron Schoenke. Here's what he has to say about his latest project, Seeds of Arkham, the new 52, and Christopher Nolan. Mark Julian: Batman: Seeds of Arkham premieres this Friday. What do you want to tell the fans about it? Aaron Schoenke: Unlike City of Scars, it's more action than story driven. It's much shorter- it's 7 minutes as opposed to 30

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=47857&t=font_coloredEXCLUSIVEfont_Interview_With_emBat_In_The_Sunsem_emAaron_Schoenkeem