

Stephen, please tell us all about Jesus Hates Zombies. Basically, the story is, a zombie plague takes over the Earth. God doesn't really care anymore, and sees humanity as a failed experiment. Jesus sees this as an opportunity to really show what he can do. Unfortunately, when he gets here he realizes his powers are based on faith, and not a lot of people are left, not a lot of faith. So, he's left as a blue collar guy that really cares about humanity. He is trying to figure out how to unite them and stop the zombie plague. Are you very religious? Is that how this came about? Or, maybe you just like zombies and wanted to bring a different aspect to that genre? I'm definitely not religious. I went through seven years of Catholic school. In that time I always saw everything that we were learning more or less, as interesting
