

Back in March, after the season finale of The Walking Dead (TWD), I had the opportunity to chat with Executive Producer Gale Anne Hurd about a number of topics ranging from her record breaking show to the early days of her career and what ultimately motivates her to continue producing films and television. You can listen to our chat in it's entirety below. Hurd spearheads her own company Valhalla Entertainment, which currently has an impressive number of comic book, film and television projects that are in various stages of development. Of course, talking with Hurd, I definitely sensed that despite the fact she's presently developing all these projects, it's her post-apocalyptic AMC show that just might be her personal favorite. It's a few months later now and Hurd is currently on TWD set, focused on what will surely be an epic third season which she described as being "intense"
