

Len Wiseman is perhaps best known for his involvement with the popular Underworld franchise after helming the first two instalments (Underworld, Underworld: Evolution) and producing - as well as once again writing - the two sequels which followed (Underworld: Rise of the Lycans, Underworld: Awakening). He also directed Die Hard 4.0, but his latest film has received perhaps more buzz than all of those combined. A remake of the classic Paul Verhoeven 1990 film which starred Arnold Schwarzenegger, Total Recall was released in the US earlier this month and goes on general release in the UK tomorrow. Praised for its impressive visual effects and with a cast which includes the likes of Colin Farrell and Bryan Cranston, it's well worth checking out if you haven't already. Below, Len Wiseman answers my questions about his take on Total Recall, and as I'm sure you will agree, it makes for a great read.
