

Source: High-Def Digest Here's an excerpt from Michael's chat with High-Def Digest. HDD: You clearly have a love for Batman. What is it about the caped crusader that captures your interest? Michael Uslan: He's a super-hero who has no super-powers. His greatest super-power is his humanity. I could strongly identify with him and believe in him. Also, he has the most primal origin story that anyone can relate to on a deeply emotional level. And... he has the world's best super-villains! HDD: Did you face a lot of rejection when trying to get the 1989 'Batman' film made? Tell us about some of what you went through. Michael Uslan: I was told I was crazy, that it was the worst idea they ever heard, and every studio turned me down. Favorite rejections: "Michael, 'Batman' will never succeed as a movie because 'Annie' didn't do well." "Michael, 'Batman and Robin' won't

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=47992&t=Executive_Producer_emMichael_Uslanem_Reflects_On_His_Long_Career_Producing_Batman_Movies