

Despite reports that Ezra Miller was on short list of actors testing to appear in the remake of 1990 Japanese anime film 'Akira,' the young actor revealed exclusively to Moviefone that he won't be appearing in the movie. "It's not true," he said in a phone interview. "That, I can assure you, will not be a reality." Miller has nothing but respect for the franchise, but insists that at the moment he's not interested in pursuing that kind of role. "It's a beautiful Japanese epic and I think it'll be a very entertaining, fun film, but no, it's not my next move," he said. - moviefone.com According to The Hollywood Reporter actor Ezra Miller and Alden Ehrenreich, were on the top of the short list to play Tetsuo in the American remake of Akira. But today Ezra has put that rumor to rest. Ezra is a young actor on the rise who is making his
