

Thanks to National Confidential (via Collider), we have these incredible photos of a custom-made $2 million home theatre which is being built in Greenwich, Connecticut. Elite Home Theater Seating are handling its construction, and as you can see from the images below, it will include a fifteen foot Batmobile replica, six batsuits, a 180" film screen, winged gargoyles, a private cylindrical stainless steel elevator with a glowing bat symbol, a secret tunnel exit, bat computers, and race-car inspired home theater chairs. So, definitely your money's worth then! According to the site, the 12,000 square foot house it is being constructed in already emulates Wayne Manor and a bust of William Shakespeare is used to reveal elevator doors, leading down to a real fingerprint scanner which is required to gain access to the Dark Knight home theater. Wow. Warner Bros. Pictures' and Legendary Pictures' "The Dark Knight Rises" is the epic conclusion
