

In honor of the international 'Star Wars Day' on May 4th, a promise of a big announcement was being hyped, even leading to a website counting it down by the second. Fans all over the globe were anticipating what it was, but were ultimately letdown when the website crashed immediately after the countdown ended, and even more so when it turned out to be none other than the details on the Blu-Ray version of the complete saga being released in one set in September. From Online Social Media: Die hard Star Wars fans were furious about the site crashing and were even more so when they found out about what the big surprise was. It turns out that the revelation was that all 6 movies were being brought out on Blu-ray. The collection will go on sale internationally on 12th September and in North America on 16th September. Disappointed fans let their anger

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=36810&t=Fans_Outraged_At_IStar_Warsi_May_The_4th_Letdown