

A few months ago, I asked you all what your most valuable comic book was. At the time, mine was a recently purchased issue of Amazing Spider-Man #39 which I've since been lucky enough to get signed by Stan "The Man" Lee. However, you guys had an even more impressive selection with titles ranging from X-Men #1 to Amazing Fantasy #15. However, I now have a very different question for you. What is your favourite comic book? Personally, I find that an extremely difficult question to answer. Should I choose a classic like Amazing Spider-Man #9 (I'm a big fan of Electro) or a slightly more recent effort such as Civil War #2 (has any other comic book had an ending THAT shocking?!). There are literally dozens more I could list, but Fantastic Four #509 by Mark Waid and the late Mike Wieringo stands out for me. It kicks off with
