

The official site for Carnegie Mellon University has been recently updated with a report alerting locals of upcoming filming for the Christopher Nolan-directed 'Batman' threequel, The Dark Knight Rises. Going into detail with when, where and revealingly what'll be filmed, which could be considered a major spoiler, read what the site offered below. Scenes outside the SEI, which will be portrayed as a prison, will include an explosion, a prison break, precision stunt driving, gunfire, atmospheric smoke, and controlled pyrotechnic explosions. Scenes outside the Fifth Ave. entrance of Mellon Institute include a standoff between two rivals that escalates into a riot. One character drives a motorcycle through the fourth floor lobby, out the front doors and down the steps onto Fifth Ave. Special effects include precision stunt driving, gunfire and atmospheric smoke. For those who live nearby and want more details, like filming dates and traffic restrictions, head over to the source.
