

It's well known that filming for Marvel Studios' crossover phenomenon The Avengers commenced earlier this week. And it's also known that only a day after, several news outlets & blogs were offered actor Samuel L. Jackson's supposed shooting script, for the right price of course. Well, due to just that, Fan Film Review is reporting: According to our sources close to the production of The Avengers filming has completely halted. The number one reason being that the studio has seen fit to call for a rewrite of the scenes that had been compromised by the release of the photographed script pages. However, this source indicated that the theft Samuel L. Jackson's script DID NOT occur in Albuquerque, but apparently happened in Burbank CA. Our sources gave no indication as to when the film would return to full production. There's no indication of the site's legitimacy, other than the fact that the editor

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=36261&t=Filming\_For\_The\_Avengers\_Halted\_Due\_To\_Samuel\_L\_Jacksons\_Script\_Theft