

Finn Jones is joined by Tom Pelphrey, Jessica Stroup and more of the Iron Fist cast backstage during NYCC to answer questions during a live-stream before their panel. They answer questions like what was their first exposure to comics, what's their favorite martial arts movie and how difficult was it to film the fight scenes? When asked what it's like to be the new superhero on the block, Jones responded, "Pretty cool, I guess. I don't really think of him as a superhero, he's just a dude that's going through a lot. It's just great to have a character that I can play around with and get to know. It's always great, taking on a new character on a television series because you get to grow with this character, hopefully for years and this is just the very first chapter. I'm really excited to start this journey with Danny Rand and just develop him over the years." Iron Fist will stream all 13
